

UNICAMP and FAPESP Joint Initiative
PhD Scholarship for students at UNICAMP
(GRE DI Code for UNICAMP -- 4440)

Unicamp and FAPESP launched in September 2020 a joint initiative to offer FAPESP scholarships to graduate students selected in qualified programs using the Graduate Record Examination (GRE®) as the selection procedure. Students with the highest scores following limits:

- At least 155 points- Verbal Reasoning;
- At least 158 points - Quantitative Reasoning;
- 4.0 or higher - Analytical Writing (among the 40% highest scores of Analytical Writing)

Will be qualified to apply for one of the 30 (thirty) available PhD scholarships from FAPESP.

The goal is to attract the best students from Brazil and abroad from all areas of knowledge.

UNICAMP is a unique university considering the proportion of graduate students compared to the general student body of about 37,500 students, almost half of which are attending graduate school - more precisely, 12,512 students in 2019. There are 72 Doctorate Programs of which 55 of them qualifying to receive these scholarships. In 2019, UNICAMP registered 1,362 master dissertations and 1,017 PhD theses.
